Newsletter 5 – March 2015

Updates on the success of NZ Navigator since its launch one year ago and great news about the latest tool developments.

First anniversary of NZ Navigator!

A total of 623 organisations have registered with NZ Navigator since the tool was launched a year ago, with 375 assessments being completed.

Organisations from all over New Zealand have accessed the tool and benefitted from the organisational insight that it fosters. Assessments have been completed by organisations from a range of sectors including social services, health, education and research.

We are beginning to develop a useful data set based on assessments. For instance, over 200 assessments were completed by organisations with 4 or fewer paid members of staff which continues to reinforce the huge outcomes being achieved by relatively small organisations within our sector.

Also of interest is the fact that a significant number of assessments have been undertaken by organisations defining themselves as developmental or growing. This continues to reinforce the agility within our sector.

A snapshot analysis in January 2015 shows that 76% of visitors to NZ Navigator were new which we see as a great affirmation of the broadening reach of the tool.

NZ Navigator is readily accessible and convenient for people to use. While the vast majority access via a desktop computer, 10% access using their mobile device.

Report back on Phase 2

The last newsletter reported that Phase 2 of NZ Navigator was complete and we are now able to offer organisations multiple participant assessments and branch assessment modules. This means that different people within an organisation can contribute to a collective view of how well the organisation is doing. It also means that branch offices can contribute their own perspective to a combined view of the organisation's performance.

The enhancements to the tool have been well received by users, with 30 assessments having been completed since the Phase 2 development went live.

We believe NZ Navigator is a world class tool and has quickly become a key tool enabling organisations to pursue improved efficiency and effectiveness.

We'd be keen to hear how NZ Navigator has prompted those reflective conversations and collaborative actions which are so necessary to organisational wellbeing.
